COLUMBUS, Ind., Aug. 29.—The Indiana Oil Refining Company Monday filed in the Bartholomew circuit court a supplementary complaint to a complaint filed by the company several days ago against Orville L. Bartlett, former president of the company.

The first complaint asked that Bartlett be restrained from interfering with the management of the company and a temporary restraining order to this effect was issued by John W. Donaker, judge.

In the new action the company asks that Henry B. Gaffin, Jr., L. G. Campbell, an attorney, and Martin C. Arnold be made defendants with Bartlett in the original complaint. The request was granted by the court.

After America entered the war restrictions were put on the use of flour and as a result much of the flour brought to the mills was reserved by the millers in accordance with orders from the national food administrator.

It also was an extra difficult matter for the millers to give his former patrons exactly the amount of flour prescribed in the orders of the food administrator.

Grist Mills in Indiana

Almost Thing of the Past

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 29.—Hundreds of small grist mills in Indiana and thousands of them in states throughout the country ceased to exist following the World war because of the fact that millions of persons in the country formed the habit of depending on bakers for their bread and pastry products. It has been discovered here.

From Kosciusko county in northern Indiana comes a report that the county which once had 14 grist mills now has but four. A similar condition prevails in other Indiana counties.

Previous to the war the farmer took his wheat to the grist mill, had it converted into flour and took the flour home for his wife to make it into bread.

After America entered the war restrictions were put on the use of flour and as a result much of the flour brought to the mills was reserved by the millers in accordance with orders from the national food administrator.

It also was an extra difficult matter for the millers to give his former patrons exactly the amount of flour prescribed in the orders of the food administrator.

RESCUES 5 WOMEN FROM BELLE RIVER

Rose Jumps Into River, Opens Sedan Door and Saves Two Girls.

PORT HURON, Mich., Aug. 29.—Five women owe their lives to the heroism of A. J. Rose of Marine City, who rescued them from the waters of Belle river Sunday after their sedan had somersaulted off the northwest abutment of the tower bridge here into seven feet of water.

The women are Mrs. William Hipp, Detroit; her daughter, Miss Dorothy Hipp; her sister, Miss Edna King and the Misses Caroline and Isabella Ott, daughters of Louis Ott, all of Detroit.

They escaped uninjured except for a few scratches and nervous shock. Mrs. Hipp and Miss Hipp and Miss Caroline Ott escaped from the car immediately after the plunge and were rescued from the surface of the river by A. J. Rose and Charles Bertrand.

Rose dived to the bottom of the river, opened the door of the sedan in which the other two women were imprisoned, and swam to shore burdened with their unconscious forms. They were in the water about eight minutes before being rescued and artificial respiration was necessary to revive them.

At first it was supposed they were the only occupants and it was not until they began to revive and gasp out questions rescuers realized two more victims of the accident were slowly drowning inside the sedan. Immediately Rose dived into the water while spectators held their breath.

He worked the sedan door open and pulled out Miss King and Miss Ott. Many hands helped the fearless diver and the apparently lifeless victims ashore and life-saving methods were at once applied.
